

CHRISTMAS DAY 2012 AT SHARDALE

home was very happy with a lot of emotions all good though, it is a warm safe feeling, we are all thinking of our children parents our brothers sisters and partners and spouses in our own ways, thinking of them thinking of us but also we are thinking and focusing on each other. it is hard for us all but we are a good strong caring and a very close family community and are there for each other to talk to and to confide in and to comfort when we are feeling down, and to cheer up when we are feeling low and to keep each other company when we feel alone, we are as one, we are a family we are all special people, we are going to be happy and have better lives for ourselves and our families we know it hurts and we all miss our loved ones, we also know that we and our loved ones can look forward to a better future a brighter future and we have got the strength in our hearts to persevere and push each other to make this happen we are good honest broken people who can and will repair ourselves with the strength and bond we all have for each other we are a family we are a community we are Shardale
